Workout Definitions

(Long) Aerobic Run

Run at a comfortable pace (not jogging). You should be able to have a conversation.

Warm Up

The first part of your run to warm up your body. Always start by jogging and gradually increase your pace naturally for about 10-15 minutes.

Cool Down

Always take an easy 10-minute jog after a fast workout to allow your body to reset.

Easy Fartlek (Speed Play)

Warm up 5-10 minutes before running a variety of different paces and distances. Mix in an easy recovery jog between faster paces. Always cool down after.

Strides

Warm up and stretch. Run over the suggested distance allowing your body to decelerate naturally. Take a 3-5 minute break every 3rd stride. Always cool down

(Long) Jog

Run slower than you think possible.

Out 'n' Back

Comfortably fast, aerobic run. Choose an out and back route to run at a comfortably fast pace. Check your split at the turnaround, then try to run with the same effort on the way back. You want to be the same or slightly faster on the way back.

Hills

Warm up. Use a hill 200-400m in length. Run uphill with an exaggerated motion with good posture. Lift the knee, concentrate on arm swing. On the downhill, relax while you let gravity take you down. Form over speed. Cool down.

Intervals

Always do a warm up. In between each repeat distance, take a recovery jog interval of the same distance. Please note: STOP the workout early if you struggle to hold the pace, you cannot hold good form. Always cool down.
